

I am writing this to encourage you not to displace traditional FM translator service with Low Power FM (LPFM).

Doing so would potentially eliminate a valuable broadcast from the airwaves.

Air1 (an FM translator service) is a vital part of the Lexington community.

As a resident of Lexington, I rejoiced when Air1 became a local station.

Finally I had the opportunity to listen to radio that was positive and encouraging.

Religion aside, it is so refreshing to turn to a station devoid of tasteless commercials, promotions and music.

I don't want to be subject to mounting nihilism of other stations, and with Air1, I don't have to.

If Air1 were to be displaced, you severely hinder this community's ability to find positive, family oriented radio.

Continued broadcasting of Air1 is in the public interest as it maintains a higher standard of content and gives us a viable option.
